Holy Reading: Genesis

In January we will read, study and mediate on the book of Genesis in the Bible. Each month we will choose a book from the Bible and practice Holy Reading. Holy Reading, Lectio Divina, has a long and venerable history in the Christian Church. Before beginning this practice, prepare the reading space. It should be comfortable, clean, and free from all distractions. Next, choose a scripture from which to read. There is a Genesis reading schedule for you in this month's newsletter. And decide upon a small section or passage from each day's reading to meditate. Now prepare yourself by closing your eyes and getting centered and still.

Holy reading of the scriptural passage is traditionally done in four steps, which have Latin names.

- 1. Lectio (reading) - Read the short passage slowly and carefully several times. You may do this aloud or silently. You may wish to make notes of anything that particularly captures your attention or seems significant.
- 2. Meditatio (thinking about) - Think about the text in a deep way, opening your mind to any nuances. You may wish to actually visualize any scenes in the text, or to write notes about your understanding of it. Traditionally, during this step the Holy Spirit is thought to help aid in scriptural understanding.
- 3. Oratio (praying) - Open your heart to God. Imagine that you and God are conversing about the passage, its meaning, and what it means for you. Allow intuition and "the small voice within" to participate. Your intellectual mind is of no use here.
- 4. Contemplatio (meditating) - Now let go of all words, and sit in silent communion with God.

Pastors will preach on the book of Genesis each Sunday of January. After the Holy Reading you can share your thoughts and questions with the pastor who preaches that week. Happy reading and holy reading!
